CONCORDIA

RECTOR'S MESSAGE

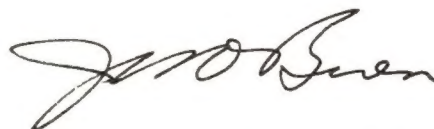

It is very hard to write a message that will have meaning for all our graduating students, one characteristic of this university being that it serves so many different groups of people. Some came here direct from CEGEP, while there are others for whom Concordia is a way to return to an education they gave up, or had to give up, many years before. There are those, increasingly, who came to acquire graduate degrees. There are those for whom graduation is the essential doorway to worthwhile employment, and those who have felt the need - or urge - to obtain a first, or a further, degree later in their careers. And the strength of the university is indeed founded on such diversity.

I would hope that, whatever your own goals, each of you is graduating with a sense of achievement, that the degree you have received will symbolize both time well spent and knowledge and understanding worth acquiring.

You have been part of the university through a period in which we have advanced a long way in defining our new personality, in giving substance to the name of Concordia University. At the same time, we have striven to preserve the qualities of the two founding institutions, whether of education, attitude or atmosphere. None of this has been easy - especially in the difficult economic and political circumstances surrounding us - but it does seem to be working.

Canadians, more and more, are coming to see education as a lifelong activity, sustained or returned to as circumstances permit. Some of you will remain here for further studies, others will return later on. You will find, I am confident, a university continually evolving and improving, and riding out well whatever storms the future may bring.

May I conclude by wishing you as a 1978 graduate of Concordia University a good and satisfying future.

To many first year students it was the first time at a time honoured Sir George tradition. Carnival. To the student body and faculty it was a chance to escape from the dreary of mid-winter and take a breath by participating or enjoying the different.

Al Jurgensfeldt, DSA Program Director, said "The high attendance at a number of the popularity of the Carnival."

Pierre Mainville, advertising and promotion manager, added: "We developed the promotion around a smiling 'bonhomme' character project the state of mind associated with Carnival. The use of the Carnival slogan 'MOOD'... helped further illustrate the atmosphere of the event."

Shelley Marshall, Carnival Chairperson, said "A large degree of the Carnival's success is due to the energy and enthusiasm of the carnival members in producing such a major event."

CONCORDIA SERVED ME WELL. . .

As a mature student, Concordia has served me well. If you are like me, with practically no formal education, but a lot of practical savy, then it's close to being ideal.

My educational experience is limited and almost wholly negative. Our class couldn't go through a week without a strapping or two. All that was seventeen years ago, but it still figures in nightmares now and then. So it's easy to understand that I had no intention of entering another classroom ever again. That was until it became necessary to do something about my French which was limited to: "Une autre Molson, s'il vous plait."

I took the Concordia immersion course last summer. Looking back, it was much the same experience as opening my bank account at the City & District. I didn't go to the bank to open an account. I went to cash a cheque. But the lady refused until I opened an account. My first deposit was $1.

It was the same with Concordia. I didn't go to register at a university. All I wanted was a French course. I didn't care about their exams and credits. But the lady insisted. Well, at the end of the course, I had my linguistic survival kit. Weeks after, Concordia sent me a computer printout. My credits. It even turned out that I had completed my language requirements for a B.A.

That got me thinking about my bank account. I continued to cash my cheques at the bank and the numbers in my bank book went up and up. I was feeling positively bourgeois! The Concordia printout even looked like a bank statement. It wasn't much, but it was so much like that first dollar.

I happen to be a history nut. I read a lot about Montreal and Ireland just for fun, so I called the history department for an appointment with the chairman. Even that was like going to a bank. Students before me, students behind me. "Next please."

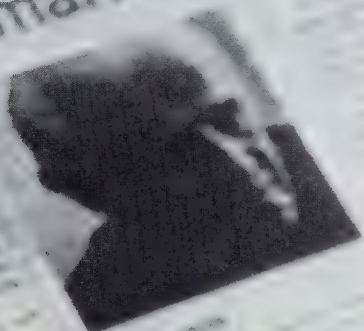

We talked about one or two courses that semester related to Montreal and Quebec. We even talked about eventual entry into an honors history program (now wouldn't that be grand!).

After going through the depressing registration procedures, it was all sorted out. First class, Wednesday evening.

I left feeling pretty good about the place. There is no special emotional involvement, but I'll learn more about history. Chances are I'll get more credits and maybe an honors history B.A. one day.

And really, what more can you ask?

TIME

Time is a funny thing
For kids it goes so slow
I remember sitting in the classroom
Just waiting for the bell to go
Sometimes I even think
That even the teacher would pray for it to go.

We used to dawdle home from school
Playing hide and seek along the way
I did not think that the time would come
When I would reach the age of twenty-one
But before I knew, it had come and gone.

And now I'm getting old and grey
Sitting here reminiscing about yesterday
But time is running out for me
As I sit here all alone
I like to think that time stood still
For I know it's time to go.

LOVE MAKES US NEW

Love alone will make us new;
it is only the past
that dies.
Think
that the end shall never come,
even though sometimes life runs
into dark strange roads.
Think also that when
our last breath is given to the wind,
we become
winged eagles in our nest.

DRAMA

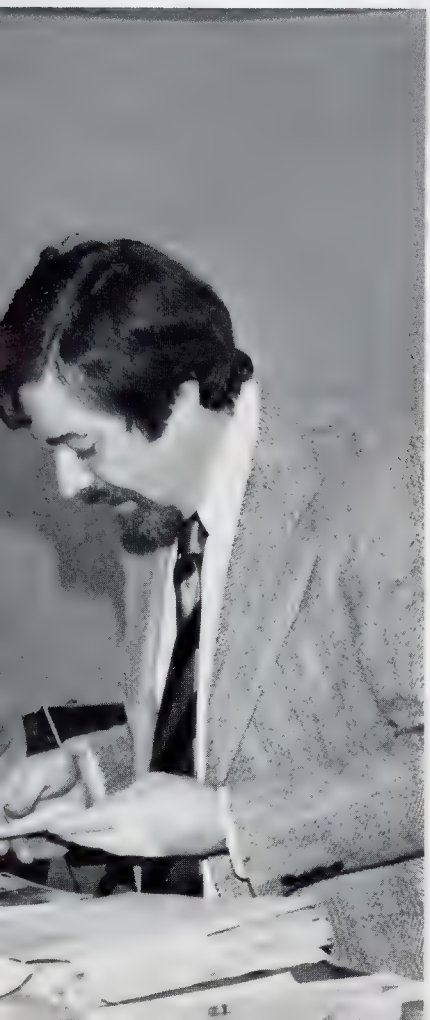

YEARBOOK EDITORIAL TEAM

THE VIEW FROM THE TOWER 50 YEARS LATER

"Reviewing the history of Loyola from its earliest beginnings," a student wrote in the 1927 Loyola Review, "one is impressed by its steady and rapid development."

Steady maybe. The rector at the time, Father Erle Bartlett, must have considered the tribute marking completion of the Administration Building ironic. Because rapid it wasn't: work had begun on the building 14 years earlier. The centre block was part of an ambitious plan to develop the 50 acres of farmland that comprised the college's new home.

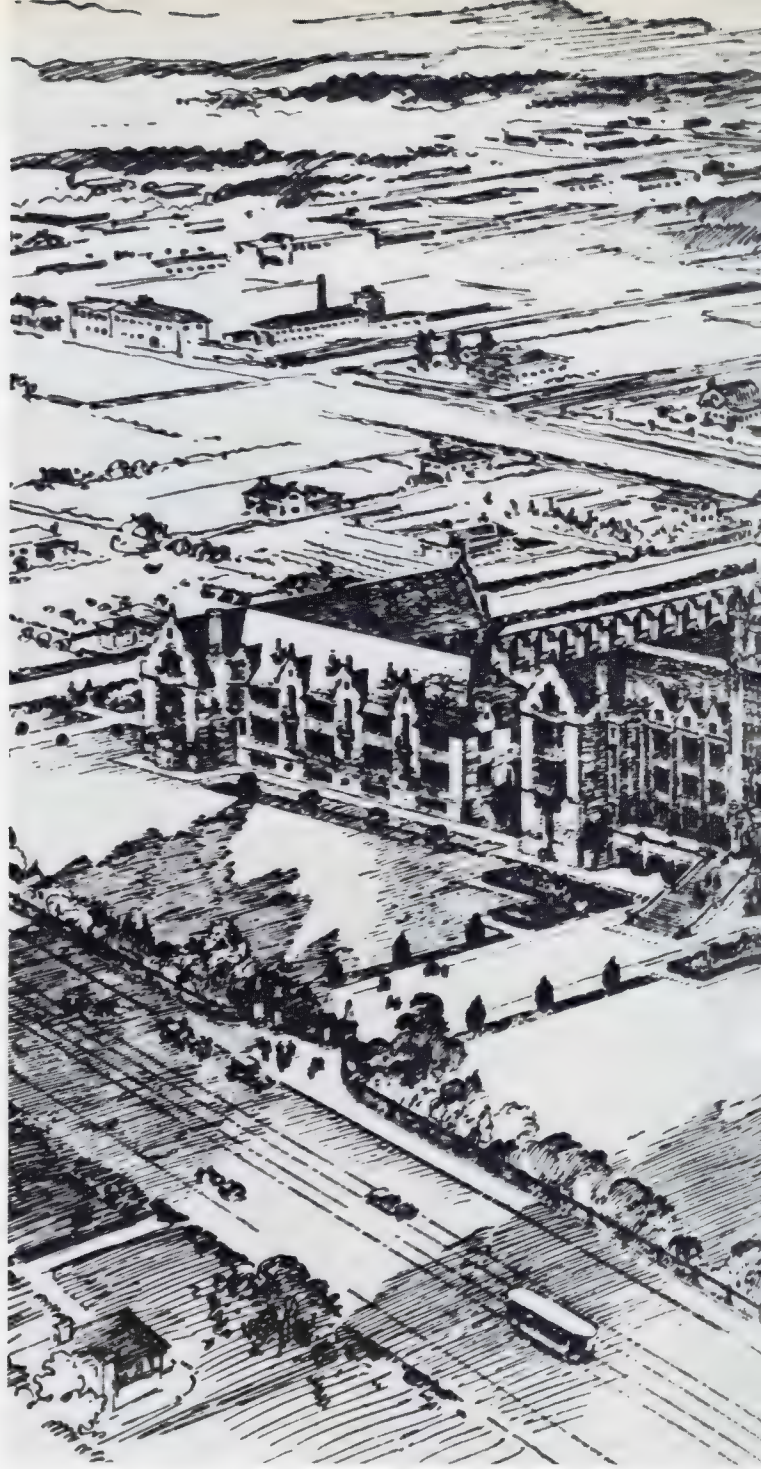

Plans were prepared in 1913 by architects Peden and McLaren for a group of buildings clustered around two quadrangles. The plan, following what the architects described as "the modern English tendency towards separate buildings for each department," called for the buildings to be in a Tudor/early Renaissance style of "English Collegiate Gothic". The walls, according to Loyola's historian Tim Slattery, "were to be of brick, faced with matte surface Greendale bricks, trimmed with Indiana limestone or terra-cotta and set upon a base of Montreal limestone." Rector Father Thomas MacMahon's dreams in English Collegiate Gothic never completely left the architects' drawing board.

Ground was broken for three of the buildings on September 23, 1913 and by Christmas the concrete work for the foundations of the Junior (today's high school), Refectory and Administration buildings had been completed. Construction above the foundation level was delayed until June 1914 by which time plans for the College buildings were already being revised.

In a letter from Peden and McLaren to Rector MacMahon dated March 30, the architects' associate Walter J. Murray confirmed a verbal request to arrange for new tenders "for the reduced scheme which is to consist of omission of chapel and certain parts of the interiors, trims, etc., and if necessary the Tower and Attic Storey Administration Block.

"We regret extremely," continued Murray, "that this course has been depended upon, as it will as you are aware, detract very much from the value of the present completed scheme ... We are pleased however to note that you will endeavour to complete the parts omitted as your finances permit ..."

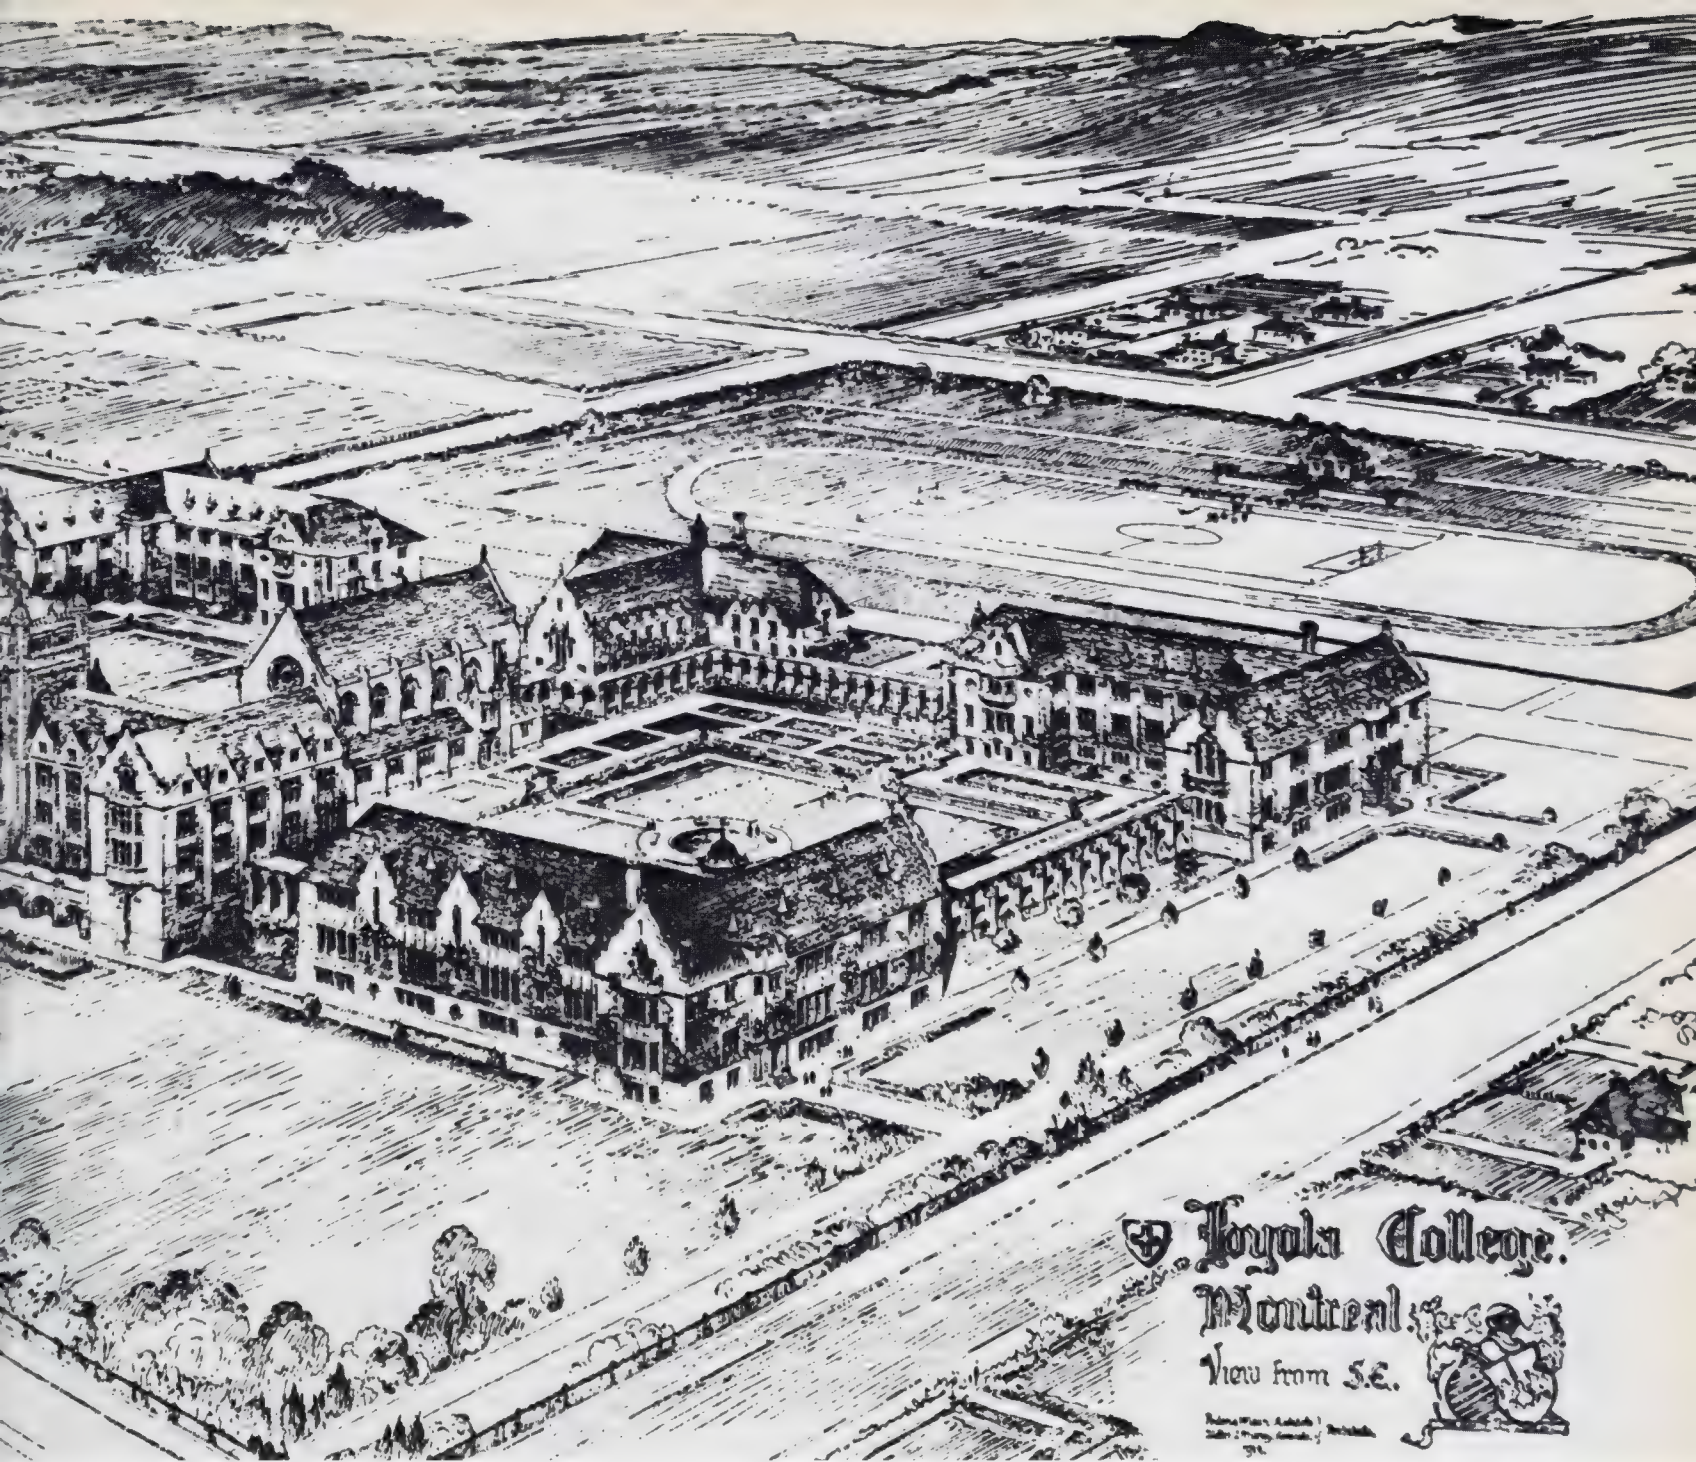

College officials soon began to wonder whether finances would ever permit. Three months later, the plans were again being examined. Should the Administration Building be built instead of the Junior Building? Should they both be built and left incomplete? On May 27 Murray wrote MacMahon with his view.

"Personally I think the grouping would look better by having the Refectory and Junior Blocks with connecting corridors entirely completed and only two storeys of the Administration Block up rather than by having the Refectory Block and Administration Block standing alone, and particularly in view of the fact that the Administration Block would still be incomplete owing to the absence of Tower ..."

"Another point against Administration Building is that it is more or less the crux of the whole scheme and if any of the buildings are to be built without question of expense (in reason of course) then it would be it, and if built now cost is the first consideration ..."

When construction resumed in June it had been decided to complete the Junior and Refectory buildings and to start the Administration Building. However, war broke out in August and work was again disrupted.

By summer 1916, the Junior and Refectory Buildings were finished but the Administration Building, says Slattery, "was left in a squat and disagreeable shape." The towerless building consisted of two floors in the central part of the building and one floor in each of the wings.

The College's financial situation was not good. Maintenance costs, five times what they were in Loyola's old Drummond Street quarter, and a sharp decline in donations due to the war led to financial troubles. Father MacMahon's excellent but very expensive taste also eroded College funds.

Loyola's first fund drive, undertaken in 1919, nearly reached its target of $300,000, providing enough money to add one storey to the central part of the Administration building and two storeys to each of the wings. By 1921 the structure had reached a uniform height of three storeys.

Rector William Hingston, S.J. had hoped that the fund drive would raise enough money to build a stadium, but Loyola could not afford the $27,358 cost estimated in April 1920.

In 1922, the year of Loyola's silver jubilee, the Loyola Old Boys' Association (now known as the Loyola Alumni Association) offered to build the stadium but there were the inevitable delays and the stadium was not completed until 1924.

The Administration Building, meanwhile, remained in a state of "uninspired flatness" for the next three years when the building was finally completed with the addition of the last two floors and the tower. The completed building, stated the 1927 Loyola Review, lent "an air of permanence and solidity to the entire College."

ATHLETICS

The Concordia Athletic programme made an effort to meet the varied interests of as many students as possible during the 1977-78 season.

The Soccer and Hockey teams fielded the most successful men's teams. Coach Harry Hus' Soccer team captured the Canadian University Classic, when undefeated in league play, and finished second in the C.I.A.U. Championships. Paul Arsenault's Hockey team captured the league title on the last day of the season, and defeated its rivals in the playoffs to represent the QUAA in the Nations. They enjoyed the greatest fan support of any team. Centre Kim Elliott's stellar play added much excitement to a great season.

The Football squad, coached by Doug Daigneault, posted a 2-5 record. The year was highlighted when Bill Harshaw was selected as the league's Rookie of the Year, while seniors Mike Hume (Male Athlete of the Year) and Clark Johnson were selected in the CFL college draft. Men's Basketball, also coached by Doug Daigneault, found themselves in third place when the season ended, despite sparks of brilliance shown by Donovan Robinson, and Leon Bynoe especially.

Keen newcomers and a nucleus of experienced players responded to Alex Wright's fine coaching of the Concordia Rugby Club by posting an excellent 4-1-1 record. This, their inaugural season, was highlighted by a 38-0 victory over Bishop's and by the performances of Québec Team standout Mark Richardson and novice Fred Hudon.

The Women's Basketball team finished the season in second place and had an overall record of 8-11. The Women's Hockey squad, featuring a new coach in Moe Godbout, finished second in the Montréal Women's College Hockey League, with an eye toward the future. The Volleyball team recorded an 84-14 overall mark which included championships at Concordia and in Plattsburg. Women's Soccer was added this season on an exhibition basis with varsity star John Gummersell directing the team from the sidelines.

Sydney Bennett, Concordia's Woman Athlete of the Year, competed in Soccer, cross-country running, and skiing, and finished fifth in the Women's CIAU Championships. Newton Walpert captured the QUAA Golf Championship as the Stingers came within one stroke of the team title. Wrestler Gary Kallos captured the Gold Medal in the 198 lb. category, while Bruce Decaire took home the silver in the 167 lb. category in CIAU Nationals. Stephen De Penasse won a Gold Medal in the QUAA Judo Tournament. Bruce Roberts came in third in the league Cross-Country Run. Congratulations should go out to all our student-athletes for their dedication, time, and effort, over the past season.

The Intramurals and club activities increased in the number of programmes and participants. A successful addition, representing the development of inter-campus relations, was the Concordia Open, a five-mile Marathon starting at Sir George and ending at Loyola. Hockey was the top intramural sport with all games played at the arena on Loyola Campus. At Sir George, with most activities at Birks Hall and at the Y.M.C.A., the Martial Arts courses were the most popular with the men, while rock jazz and modern dance were the women's top choices.
